

HAL
open science

al-Jazari, Shams al-Din

Mathieu Eychenne

► To cite this version:

| Mathieu Eychenne. al-Jazari, Shams al-Din. Encyclopaedia of Islam THREE, 2018. halshs-01784920

HAL Id: halshs-01784920

<https://shs.hal.science/halshs-01784920v1>

Submitted on 2 Aug 2018

HAL is a multi-disciplinary open access archive for the deposit and dissemination of scientific research documents, whether they are published or not. The documents may come from teaching and research institutions in France or abroad, or from public or private research centers.

L'archive ouverte pluridisciplinaire HAL, est destinée au dépôt et à la diffusion de documents scientifiques de niveau recherche, publiés ou non, émanant des établissements d'enseignement et de recherche français ou étrangers, des laboratoires publics ou privés.

Ghūr; at Tig'nābād, he again defeated the Ghaznavid forces, this time under Khusraw Shāh (r. c.552–55/1157–60). He also welcomed Nizārī Ismā'īlī dā'īs (missionaries) from Alamūt to proselytise in Ghūr.

‘Alā’ al-Dīn died in Rabī‘ II 556/April 1161, after attempting to regain possession of Ghazna, then under the last Ghaznavid sultan, Khusraw Malik (r. 555–82/1160–86). He was succeeded by his son, Sayf al-Dīn Muḥammad (r. 556–8/1161–3), who expelled the Ismā'īlīs from Ghūr. Sovereignty then passed to other lines of the Ghūrīd dynasty, although his youngest son, ‘Alā’ al-Dīn Atsız (r. 607–10/1210–4), eventually ruled at Fīrūzkūh, as a vassal to the Kh‘ārazmshāh ‘Alā’ al-Dīn Muḥammad b. Tekesh (r. 596–617/1200–20).

The Ghūrīds’ Persianate literary culture was in full flower by this period, but most of this literature has perished, including ‘Alā’ al-Dīn’s own dīwān (collected poems), seen by ‘Awfī (d. c.630/1233) in Samarqand.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SOURCES

‘Awfī, Lubāb al-albāb, ed. Sa‘īd Nafīsī (Tehran 1335sh/1956), 39–40, 342–4; Dawlatshāh Samarqandī, Tadhkirat al-shu‘arā’, ed. Muḥammad ‘Abbāsī (Tehran 1337sh/1958), 85–6; Fakhr-i Mudabbir, Adāb al-ḥarb wa-l-shajā‘a, partial ed. Aḥmad Suhaylī Kh‘ānsārī (Tehran 1346sh/1967), 437–42, 480–2; Faṣīḥ-i Kh‘āfī, Mujmal-i faṣīḥī, ed. Muḥsin Nājī Naṣrābādī (Tehran 1386sh/2007), vol. 2; Firishta, Ta’rīkh-i Firishta, lithograph ed. John Briggs (Bombay 1831), 1:87–90, 96–7; Ibn al-Athīr, al-Kāmil fī l-ta’rīkh, ed. Carl J. Tornberg (Beirut 1386/1966), vol. 11; Jūzjānī, Ṭabaqāt-i Nāsirī, ed. ‘Abd al-Ḥayy Ḥabībī (Kabul 1342–3sh/1963–4<sup>2</sup>), vol. 1; Mīrkh‘ānd, Rawdat al-safā’, ed. and trans. Charles-François Defrémery, Histoire des sultans ghourides, JĀ, ser. 4, vol. 2 (1843), 167–200, repr. Paris 1844; Zāhīr al-Dīn Nīshāpūrī, Saljūq-nāma, ed. A. H. Morton (London 2004), 59–60; Nizāmī ‘Arūḍī, Chahār maqāla, ed. Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Wahhāb Qazvīnī, Berlin 1927; Rashīd al-Dīn Faḍlallāh, Jāmi‘ al-tawārīkh. Ta’rīkh-i Hind va Sīnd va Kāshīr, ed. Muḥammad Rawshan (Tehran 1384sh/2005), 57–9; Rāvandī, Rāhat al-ṣudūr va āyat al-surūr, ed. Muḥammad Iqbal (London 1921), 174–7; Shabānkārāī, Majma‘ al-ansāb, ed. Mīr Hāshim Muḥaddīth (Tehran 1363sh/1984), 86–7, 122–3.

STUDIES

Clifford Edmund Bosworth, The later Ghaznavids. Splendour and decay. The dynasty in Afghanistan and northern India 1040–1186 (Edinburgh 1977), 111–23; Ghulam Mustafā Khan, A history of Bahrām Shāh of Ghaznin, IC 23/2 (1949), 199–214; K. B. Nasim, The life and works of Hakīm Auhad-ud-Dīn Anwarī (Lahore 1967), 52–9.

MICHAEL O’NEAL

al-Jazarī, Shams al-Dīn

Shams al-Dīn Abū ‘Abdallāh Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Jazarī (d. 739/1338), better known simply as al-Jazarī, was a Syrian historian, famous for his chief work entitled Ḥawādīth al-zamān wa-anbā’uḥu wa-wafayāt al-akābir wa-l-‘ayān min abnā’ihī (“Events and news of the time, with obituaries of its great and noble sons”), known also as Ta’rīkh al-Jazarī (“Al-Jazarī’s history”). With the exception of a short biography written by his master and friend, the historian and traditionist al-Birzālī (d. 739/1339), and some autobiographical data in his own writings, little is known of Jazarī’s family and life. His ancestors originated in Jazīrat Ibn ‘Umar, south of Mosul, in Upper Mesopotamia. His paternal great grandfather, Nafīs al-Dīn Ibrāhīm (d. 598/1201), had settled in Upper Egypt at the end of the sixth/twelfth century. His father Ibrāhīm (d. 693/1294) later moved to Damascus, where he became a prominent merchant.

Al-Jazarī was born in Damascus on 10 Rabī I 658/24 February 1260. According to al-Birzālī, he was a ḥadīth scholar and notary witness (ʿadl) in his hometown. He left Damascus only twice, for short periods: in 681/1282 he performed the ḥājj to Mecca, and in 701/1301–2 he travelled to Cairo to study ḥadīth with famous scholars. He was also a Ṣūfī, and he possessed a good knowledge of medicine. He died on 12 Rabī I 739/28 September 1338.

His chronicle was considered by his contemporaries as a reliable source. Al-Jazarī often describes events as an eyewitness and otherwise refers mainly to oral sources. He chose his informants carefully, according to their probity and the truthfulness of their narratives. He gathered accounts from individuals with a variety of social backgrounds (e.g., judges, soldiers, administrators, merchants). For these reasons, his chronicle held a special place in the Syrian historiography of the eighth/fourteenth century and is a valuable work providing colourful anecdotes and original details that shed new light on unknown aspects of social, political, and economic life in Damascus (see, e.g., Eychenne).

Thanks to al-ʿAzzāwī (Shams al-Dīn), Sauvaget, and Haarmann (Édition de la chronique), who pleaded passionately for the editing of al-Jazarī's work, we have a comprehensive survey of the preserved manuscripts of his chronicle. Sauvaget identified two successive stages of writing. Some manuscripts are draft documents (musawwada) of the text that gather raw materials arranged chronologically. Thus, MSS Gotha 1559, 1560, and 1561 deal partially or completely with the years 624–33, 635–48, 653–57, and 676–95, and MS Köprülü 1037 narrates, in the annalistic style, events (ḥawādīth) and obituaries (wafāyāt) of years 725–38. But only a single manuscript of the definitive text has been preserved, in Paris, that is, BnF MS 6739, which covers the years 689–98.

Sauvaget published an abridged version translated into French of the Paris manuscript, Haarmann edited the section of the Gotha MSS covering the years 677–95 (Quellenstudien, 1–116), and al-Tadmūrī edited the chronicle (vol. 1, years 689–99; vols. 2–3, years 725–38). One of his pupils, the famous Syrian historian al-Dhahabī (d. 748/1348), wrote the Mukhtār al-Jazarī ("Selections from al-Jazarī"), comprising short quotations from al-Jazarī's chronicle, from 593/1197 to 699/1300.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Biographical sources

For biographical data on al-Jazarī's life, see, in particular, the notice by al-Birzālī: ʿAbbās al-ʿAzzāwī, Shams al-Dīn b. al-Jazarī wa-taʿrīkhuhu, Majallat al-Majmaʿ al-ʿIlmī al-ʿArabī 19 (1944), 525; Donald P. Little, An introduction to Mamlūk historiography (Wiesbaden 1970), 53; Jean Sauvaget, La chronique de Damas, Paris 1949.

WORKS OF AL-JAZARĪ

al-Dhahabī, al-Mukhtār min taʿrīkh Ibn al-Jazarī al-musammā ḥawādīth al-zamān wa-anbāʾuhu wa-wafāyāt al-akābir wa-al-aʿyān min abnāʾihi, ed. Khuḍayr ʿAbbās Muḥammad Khalīfa al-Manshidāwī, Beirut 1988; Ulrich Haarmann (ed.), Quellenstudien zur frühen Mamlukenzeit (Freiburg 1969), 1–116 (text edition); al-Jazarī, Taʿrīkh ḥawādīth al-zamān wa-anbāʾuhu wa-wafāyāt al-akābir wa-l-aʿyān min abnāʾihi, ed. Umar ʿAbd al-Salām Tadmūrī, 3 vols., Sidon and Beirut 1998; Jean Sauvaget (trans.), La chronique de Damas d'al-Jazarī (années 689–698 H.), Paris 1949.

STUDIES

ʿAbbās al-ʿAzzāwī, Shams al-Dīn b. al-Jazarī wa-taʿrīkhuhu, Majallat al-Majmaʿ al-ʿIlmī

al-ʿArabī 19 (1944), 524–30; Claude Cahen, Addenda sur al-Djazari, IOS 2 (1972), 144–7; Ulrich Haarmann, L'édition de la chronique mamelouke syrienne de Shams ad-Dīn Muḥammad al-Jazarī, BEO 27 (1974), 195–203; Mathieu Eychenne, La production agricole de Damas et de la Ghūta au XIV<sup>e</sup> siècle. Diversité, taxation et prix des cultures maraîchères d'après al-Jazarī (m. 739/1338), JESHO 56/4–5 (2013), 569–630; Donald P. Little, An introduction to Mamlūk historiography. An analysis of Arabic annalistic and biographical sources for the reign of al-Malik an-Nāṣir Muḥammad ibn Qalāʾūn, Wiesbaden 1970.

MATHIEU EYCHENNE

Jīvan, Aḥmad

Aḥmad Jīvan (d. 1130/1718) was a staunch Ḥanafī jurist in the times of Awrangzīb, who was known for his excellent faculty of memorisation. Because of his major contributions to the field of uṣūl al-fiqh (principles of jurisprudence), he made it to the royal court. In his voluminous exegesis, Tafsīrāt Aḥmadiyya, he wrote about those verses from which could be derived juristic commands, basic principles, and scholastic problems. Aḥmad's basic rule was that everything is permissible unless it is explicitly forbidden in the Qurʾān.

Aḥmad Jīvan was born in 1047/1638 in the small market and garrison town (qaṣba) of Amethi (Amethī; see Bakhsh), near Lucknow in Avadh, into a Ṣiddīqī (belonging to the descendants of Abū Bakr, a Companion of Muḥammad and the first caliph, r. 11–3/632–4), Ḥanafī family (ʿAlī, 69f.). Although Aḥmad was a follower of the Qādirī order, he adopted the epithet “Jīvan” (life) with reference to his Chishtī-Nizāmī ancestor Bahāʾ al-Ḥaqq Khāṣṣa-yi Khudā (d. 922/1517), whose nickname was “Jīvu” (live!) (Miṣbāḥī, 39, 175–80) (the Qādiriyya is a widespread Sufi order of which ʿAbd al-Qādir Jīlānī (470–561/1077 or 1078–1166), a Ḥanbalī scholar active in Baghdad, became after his death the namesake and patron;—the Chishtiyya was introduced in India by Muʿīn al-Dīn Sijzī, d. 627/1230; after his second successor, Farīd al-Dīn Masʿūd, d. 664/1266, two main branches developed, the Ṣābirīyya, followers of ʿAlāʾ al-Dīn Ṣābir Kaliyarī, d. 690/1291, and the Nizāmīyya, followers of Nizām al-Dīn Awliyāʾ d. 725/1324–5). Aḥmad is said to have memorised the Qurʾān by the age of seven. After his father's death, he studied in nearby qaṣbas with the Chishtī shaykh Muḥammad Ṣādiq al-Sitarkhī (d. 1085/1649) and Luṭfallāh Kuravī Jahānābādī, near Fatehpur (ʿAbd al-Ḥayy, 5:408, 345). At twenty-two years of age, he started teaching in Amethi and, at forty, he toured Ajmer and settled in Delhi to become a famed teacher. Amongst his students was Zayb al-Nisāʾ (d. 1113/1702), daughter of the future ruler Awrangzīb (r. 1068–1118/1658–1707) (ʿAlī, 83f.).

At the age of fifty-five, he went on the ḥajj and, upon his return five years later, joined Awrangzīb's army in the Deccan. In 1112/1701 he made another ḥajj and, after teaching ḥadīth in Mecca and Medina, he returned to Amethi at the age of seventy, to be initiated in the Qādiriyya by Shaykh Yāsīn b. ʿAbd al-Razzāq (1139/1726). After a couple of years Aḥmad returned to Delhi with several students. He was received by the Mughal emperor Shāh ʿĀlam I (r. 1118–24/1707–12) in Ajmer and toured Lahore with him. He died praying in the jāmiʿa (congregational) mosque of Delhi in 1130/1718 and was buried at the shrine of Muḥammad Shaffʿ Dihlavī (d. 1109/1697); fifty days later his body was moved to his madrasa in Amethi (ʿAbd al-Ḥayy, 6:21–4).